

Table of content

Title	1
Approval Sheet ( Halaman Pengesahan )	2
Statement Letter ( Halaman Pernyataan )	3
Table of content	4
Abstract	6
Chapter 1	8
Introduction	8
1.1. Background	8
1.2. Research Questions	17
1.3. Significance	17
1.4. Literature Review	18
1.4.1. Economic-based resource nationalism	19
1.4.2. Political-based resource nationalism	22
1.4.3. Political geographic based resource nationalism	28
1.5. Theoretical framework: the making of resources	31
1.6. Argument	35
1.7. Methods and Framework of Thinking	36
1.8. Overview of chapters	39
Chapter 2:	42
Resource making in Indonesia's petroleum industry: the consolidation and making of oil as energy resources	42
2.1. Colonial era: oil as a new resource	43
2.1.1. Commercial production of oil and the rise of property regime	44
2.1.2. Segregated spatial planning	54
2.1.3. Prestige and construction of a modern subject	58
2.2. Soekarno: decolonizing oil	60
2.2.1. Nationalizing foreign assets	60
2.2.2. Pertamina and the return of three big oil companies	63
2.2.3. Indonesianization of workers	68
2.3. Soeharto: consolidation of oil as source of energy	69
2.3.1. Pertamina's dual function and liberalization after oil boom	70

2.3.2. Java-centric and asymmetry economic development	74
2.3.3. Oil as the door to patronage-led distribution system	76
Chapter 3	79
Redefining post-reform oil: witheredness and encounter with new resources in the making	79
3.1. Wahid and Megawati: asserting oil as a resource	80
3.1.1. Liberalization and introduction of Cost Recovery PSC	80
3.1.2. Investor-friendly gesture and revenue sharing	81
3.1.3. Working in oil sectors as desirable	82
3.2. Yudhoyono: withering of conventional oil	83
3.2.1. Further liberalization	83
3.2.2. The emergence of renewable energy	83
3.2.3. Civil society in the oil policy	88
3.3. Widodo: moving with and from oil	89
3.3.1. Flexibility and move towards low-carbon economy	90
Flexibility of Gross Split PSC and incentives towards foreign investment	90
Move towards low-carbon economy and renewable energy	97
3.3.2. The exits of big companies	101
3.3.3. Sustainability as way of living	107
Chapter 4	109
Implications: the path dependence from the historical trajectories of oil making	109
4.1. Contribution of the historical trajectories: embeddedness and incumbency of the resources	110
4.2. The transformation of oil in the changing global economy	115
Chapter 5	122
Conclusion: Bring resource-making and resource nationalism into conversation	122
Bibliography	128