

ABSTRACT

The Batu Raden tourist attraction is nature tourism located in Karangmangu Village, Batu Raden District, Banyumas Regency. The Batu Raden tourist attraction is leading nature tourism because it has won various awards in the last ten years, including first place in the Sapta Pesona application competition and second place in the Anugerah Pesona Indonesia. This is supported by exciting objects to be visited such as natural scenery from the Mount Slamet hillside, waterfalls, Pancuran Telu, Pancuran Pitu, suspension bridges, Batu Raden natural theater, and swimming pools. Based on statistical data on tourist visits in the Banyumas Regency, the Batu Raden tourist attraction is ranked first with the most visitors.

This research was conducted to determine the impact of the Batu Raden tourist attraction on the economic, social, and cultural conditions of the people of Karangmangu Village as a tourism support village. These three impacts were examined by observation, interviews, and literature study. Identification of all these impacts is categorized based on the positive and negative impacts that occur in the community.

The results of the study show that the Batu Raden tourist attraction impacts the economic conditions of the Karangmangu Village community. Its effects are seen in (1) how the attraction drives the village economy, (2) changes in people's income, (3) decreased numbers of the unemployed around the community, (4) increased concerns about formal education, (5) increases in community creativity, and (6) disease outbreaks that affect the tourism economy and society. In addition, the social impacts that occur in society are (1) increased quality of life, (2) building of new communities, and (3) the emergence of crime. Other impacts are in the form of cultural impacts such as (1) tourist visits affecting the existence of local culture, (2) the commercialization of cultural arts, and (3) open behavior of the community towards tourists. Currently, all of these impacts are being felt by the people of Karangmangu Village.

Due to the positive and negative impacts that occurred in the Karangmangu Village community, a community-based economic, social, and cultural impact management strategy was formulated. The steps taken in community-based tourism impact management are (1) determining the participation role of local communities involved, (2) mapping the impact of tourism, (3) making decisions on managing economic, social, and cultural impacts, (4) making efforts to educate the community, (5) monitoring and (6) evaluation. This management strategy is a recommendation that can be carried out by the Karangmangu Village community so that in the future it can increase the positive impacts and reduce the negative impacts of the Batu Raden tourist attraction.
