ABSTRACT

Kandri Tourism Village is one of 3 tourist villages in the city of Semarang, Central Java, which is famous for its local culture and other excellent tourism potential. Cooperation between community elements, tourism village managers, and the sub-district government plays an important role in the progress and welfare of the local community. The concept of community-based tourism is a tourism village management concept that gives full rights and involves local communities in all tourism activities carried out. CBT is closely related to community participation and this involvement includes 4 stages at the level of community participation, starting from the planning, implementation, utilization of results, and evaluation stages. The purpose of this study is to explain what the people of Kandri Tourism Village know about tourism villages and the forms and participation that have been carried out by the local community in managing tourism in their village.

This study uses a descriptive qualitative approach and data collection techniques with in-depth interviews, direct observation, and document study. In-depth interviews were conducted with 24 informants consisting of the head of the Kandri Village, the chairman and administrators of the Pandanaran Pokdarwis, homestay and UMKM owners, and the people of Kandri Tourism Village. Selection of informants using purposive sampling.

The results of the study show that the people of the Kandri Tourism Village understand the tourism village as a potential, program/activity, assistance, and positive impact. The form of community participation in the Kandri Tourism Village in the management of the tourism village is based on the participation of thought and energy. While the level of community participation from all stages is classified as moderate. Other findings relate to the people of the Kandri Tourism Village who are less participatory due to busy work outside the Kandri area, and the Semarang City government which has not provided financial assistance and is not participating in promoting the Kandri Tourism Village.
