ABSTRACT

Marketing Strategy for the TikTok Shop Feature in Indonesia According to John Stuart Mill's Utilitarianism Approach

The problem in this research concerns the social commerce phenomenon TikTok Shop which is often seen as threatening local products and domestic conventional markets by joining the local e-commerce application Tokopedia. The aim of this research is to critically analyze the marketing strategy for the TikTok Shop feature in Indonesia according to John Stuart Mill's utilitarian approach to business ethics.

The material object of this research is TikTok Shop's marketing strategy in Indonesia with the formal object being John Stuart Mill's utilitarianism as an approach to business ethics. This research is qualitative research on actual phenomena. The data used is obtained using a literature study which begins with data inventory, classification, analysis, and data processing. The result analysis stage is in the form of description, interpretation, holistic, and critical reflection. This research outlines the marketing strategy of TikTok Shop in Indonesia and analyzes it critically through John Stuart Mill's utilitarianism approach.

The results of this research are first, the marketing strategy carried out by TikTok Shop x Tokopedia, namely the integration of TikTok Shop features with the Tokopedia platform, a viral marketing strategy that includes creative campaigns as well as price and shipping cost promotions, and a strategy to expand target users. Second, the marketing strategy implemented by TikTok Shop x Tokopedia does not fully comply with the principles of John Stuart Mill's utilitarianism, especially the principle of higher utility. This is because the TikTok Shop x Tokopedia marketing strategy still focuses on physical needs.
