ABSTRACT

The presence of internet technology and the global job market has created a new era in the labor market that is the boundaryless workplace era. This era creates new opportunities as well as challenges in a career. Non-conventional career paths offer the freedom to direct and manage career and work flexibility without being limited by space and time. To be able to meet career expectations and achieve the positive consequences of a career, a career process is needed. This study aims to find theoretical concepts that explain the career construction process in the boundaryless workplace era. This research used qualitative approach with grounded theory method. The research data were interview result and online media documentation data from 20 millennials. Data was analyzed by using manual coding and in the final stages of data coding was managed by using one computer assisted qualitative data analysis software (CAQDAS) that is NVivo.

The main findings of this career construction study were "A multiple loops career crafting model: Construction career in the boundaryless workplace era. The thesis formulation was "The process of career construction in the boundaryless workplace era was the process of repetitive learning to realize the expectations by creating a career that was characterized by uniqueness, self-development continuity, digital-global perspective, collaboration, and flexibility so as to achieve career happiness".
