ABSTRACT

PT Pupuk Indonesia (Persero) is a state-owned holding company in the fertilizer industry formed by the government in 1998. At the beginning of its formation, PT Pupuk Indonesia (Persero) functioned as the operating holding company which later turned into a strategic and investment holding company in 2010. The purpose of this research is analyzing operational and financial performance PT Pupuk Indonesia (Persero) before and after became a strategic and investment holding company. Operational performance is measured by the amount of fertilizer and non-fertilizer production, natural gas consumption, subsidized fertilizer distribution and the sale of non-subsidized fertilizers. Financial performance is measured by financial ratios which serve as a guideline for measuring the performance of SOEs through the Decree of the Minister of Finance of the Republic of Indonesia No.100/MBU/2002.

The Researcher used a qualitative descriptive research method in analyzing the operational and financial performance of PT Pupuk Indonesia (Persero). The results of in-depth interviews were presented to analyze more deeply the performance of PT Pupuk Indonesia (Persero) before and after becoming a strategic and investment holding company.

The results of the study show that there are differences in performance across all measures of operational performance between before and after becoming a strategic and investment holding company. Whereas for financial performance there is no significant difference in the financial ratios of ROE, ROI, Cash ratio, Current ratio, Collection Period, Inventory Turnover, and Equity to Asset Ratio, but there is a significant difference in the ratio of Total Asset Turnover between before and after becoming strategic and investment holding company. The results of the interview indicated that there had been a synergy in the Fertilizer Industry Holding Company. This is indicated by programs that are well run by the Company.
