Abstract

This study aims to examine the effect of corporate social responsibility (CSR) on the market and accounting performance. Furthermore, CSR affects the firm's Cost of Equity (COE) as well. In addition, this study also examines the moderating role of COE on the relationship of CSR to market and accounting performance. This study uses panel data regression analysis with 130 samples of companies listed on the Indonesia Stock Exchange (IDX) during 2018-2019. The results show that CSR reduces the firm's market performance and is able to increase the firm's accounting performance. On the other hand, the results show that CSR can't reduce the firm's COE. Meanwhile, the results of the moderation test show that COE makes the relation between CSR and market performance positive. This result, in turn, makes the positive relationship between CSR and accounting performance weak.
